STACK'S is truly honored to offer at auction the JOHN L. BALDERSTON III Collection of Ancient Coins. One of America's most distinguished authors, journalists and foreign affairs experts, Mr. Balderston is best-known and best-loved by the public-at-large as the scenario-writer of such distinguished motion pictures as Lives of a Bengal Lancer, Prisoner of Zenda and Last of the Mohicans. His play Berkeley Square has become a classic of stage and screen. In all his work Mr. Balderston has shown an appreciation of and insight into the very essence and spirit of past generations. This discrimination and connoisseurship were applied to his collecting. For the collecting of ancient coins is most particularly an aristocratic branch of numismatics. The collector of ancient coins inevitably has an acute sense of history, a superior feeling for the well-springs of our culture and customs, and a deep appreciation of artistic merit. If he did not have these characteristics he would not collect ancient coins.

John L. Balderston III possesses these qualities to the highest degree. That wisdom which he displayed as a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the National Institute of Social Sciences is clearly evident in his collection. The panorama of the ancient world unfolds as one examines his coins.

It is difficult to single out a particular coin, or even a particular series. The archaic Greek masterpieces, the Syracusan gold coins, the series of Roman Republican and Empire pieces, are worthy of mention. As historian he appreciated the rare and lesser-known coins of the ancient islands and cities. As dramatist and student of human nature he could not fail to savor the distinction of those extraordinary Roman women—Antonia, Julia Titi, Agrippina, Marciana, Sabina, and a host of others—whose portrait gallery adorns the Roman Imperial Series. The Ides of March coin represented in this collection speaks to us today.

Thus, with pride, we present this small but important collection.

Numismatically yours,
